

LUC

LUBRIFICATION. n. f. [lubricus and facio, Latin.] The act of smoothing.

A twofold liquor is prepared for the inunction and lubrification of the heads of the bones; an oily one, furnished by the marrow; a mucilaginous, supplied by certain glandules seated in the articulations.

LUBRICATION. n. f. [lubricus and facio, Latin.] The act of lubricating or smoothing.

The cause is lubrification and relaxation, as in medicines emollient; such as milk, honey, and mallows.

LUC. n. f. [perhaps from lupus, Latin.] A pike full grown.

They give the dozen white *luc*s in their coat.

LUCENT. adj. [lucens, Latin.] Shining; bright; splendid.

I meant the day-star should not brighter rise,
Nor lend like influence from his *luc*ent seat.

LUCID. n. f. [lucidus, Latin; lucide, French.]
1. Shining; bright; glittering.

Over his *luc*id arms
A military vest of purple flow'd;

It contracts it, preserving the eye from being injured by too vehement and *luc*id an object, and again dilates it for the apprehending objects more remote in a fainter light.

If at the same time a piece of white paper, or a white cloth, or the end of one's finger, be held at the distance of about a quarter of an inch, or half an inch, from that part of the glass where it is moist in motion, the electric vapour which is excited by the friction of the glass against the hand will, by dashing against the white paper, cloth, or finger, be put into such an agitation as to emit light, and make the white paper, cloth, or finger, appear *luc*id like a glow-worm.

The pearly shell its *luc*id globe unfold,
And Phœbus warm the rip'ning ore to gold.

LUCID. adj. [lucidus, Latin; lucide, French.]
2. Pellucid; transparent.

On the fertile banks
Of Abbana and Phaphar, *luc*id streams.

On the transparent side of a globe, half silver and half of a transparent metal, we saw certain strange figures circularly drawn, and thought we could touch them, till we found our fingers stopped by that *luc*id substance.

LUCID. adj. [lucidus, Latin; lucide, French.]
3. Bright with the radiance of intellect; not darkened with madness.

The long diffusions of the two houses, which, although they had *luc*id intervals and happy pauses, yet they did ever hang over the kingdom, ready to break forth.

Some beams of wit on other souls may fall;
Strike through and make a *luc*id interval;

But Shadwell's genuine night admits no rays,
His rising fogs prevail upon the day.

I believed him in a *luc*id interval, and desired he would please to let me see his book.

A few sensual and voluptuous persons may, for a season, eclipse this native light of the soul; but can never so wholly smother and extinguish it, but that, at some *luc*id intervals, it will recover itself again, and shine forth to the conviction of their conscience.

LUCIDITY. n. f. [from lucidus.] Splendor; brightness.

LUCIFEROUS. adj. [lucifer, Latin.] Giving light; affording means of discovery.

The experiment is in itself not ignoble, and *luc*iferous enough, as shewing a new way to produce a volatile salt.

LUCIFICK. adj. [lux and facio, Latin.] Making light; producing light.

When made to converge, and so mixed together; though their *luc*ifick motion be continued, yet by interfering, that equal motion, which is the colorifick, is interrupted.

LUC. n. f. [geluck, Dutch.]
1. Chance; accident; fortune; hap; casual event.

He forc'd his neck into a nooze,
To shew his play at fast and loose;

And when he chanc'd t' escape, mistook
For art and subtlety, his luc.

Some such method may be found by human industry or *luc*k, by which compound bodies may be resolved into other substances than they are divided into by the fire.

LUC. n. f. [geluck, Dutch.]
2. Fortune, good or bad.

Glad of such *luc*k the luckless lucky maid,
A long time with that savage people staid;

To gather breath in many miseries.
Farwel, good Salisbury, and good *luc*k go with thee.

I did demand what news from Shrewsbury.
He told me, that rebellion had ill *luc*k,

And that young Harry Percy's spur was cold.
That part of mankind who have had the justice, or the

*luc*k, to pass, in common opinion, for the wisest, have followed a very different sent.

LUD

Such, how highly soever they may have the *luc*k to be thought of, are far from being Israelites indeed.

The guests are found too numerous for the treat,
But all, it seems, who had the *luc*k to eat,

Swear they ne'er tasted more delicious meat.

LUCILY. adv. [from lucky.] Fortunately; by good hap.

It is the pencil thrown *luc*ily full upon the horse's mouth, to express the foam, which the painter with all his skill could not form.

It happens *luc*ily for the establishment of a new race of kings upon the British throne, that the first of this royal line has all high qualifications.

LUCINESS. n. f. [from lucky.] Good fortune; good hap; casual happiness.

He who sometimes lights on truth, is in the right but by chance; and I know not whether the *luc*iness of the accident will excuse the irregularity of his proceeding.

LUCLESS. adj. [from luc.] Unfortunate; unhappy.

Glad of such *luc*k, the *luc*less lucky maid,
A long time with that savage people staid,

To gather breath in many miseries.
Never shall my thoughts be base,

Though *luc*less, yet without disgrace.

What else but his immoderate lust of pow'r,
Pray's made and granted in a *luc*less hour?

LUCKY. n. f. [from luc; geluckig, Dutch.] Fortunate; happy by chance.

But I more fearful, or more *luc*ky wight,
Dismay'd with that deformed, dismal sight,

Fled fast away.
Perhaps some arm more *luc*ky than the rest,

May reach his heart, and free the world from bondage.

LUCRATIVE. adj. [lucratus, French; lucratus, Latin.] Gainful; profitable; bringing money.

The trade of merchandize being the most *luc*rative, may bear usury at a good rate; other contracts not so.

The disposition of Ulysses inclined him to pursue the more dangerous way of living by war, than the more *luc*rative method of life by agriculture.

LUCRE. n. f. [lucrum, Latin.] Gain; profit; pecuniary advantage. In an ill sense.

Malice and *luc*re in them
Have laid this woe here.

They all the sacred mysteries of heav'n
To their own vile advantages shall turn,

Of *luc*re, and ambition.
A foul supreme in each hard instance try'd,

Above all pain, all anger, and all pride,
The rage of pow'r, the blast of publick breath,

The lust of *luc*re, and the dread of death,
What can be thought of the procuring letters by fraud,

and the printing them merely for *luc*re?

LUCRIFEROUS. adj. [lucrum and fero, Latin.] Gainful; profitable.

Silver was afterwards separated from the gold, but in so small a quantity, that the experiment, the cost and pains considered, was not *luc*riferous.

LUCRIFICK. adj. [lucrum and facio, Latin.] Producing gain.

LUCRATION. n. f. [lucro, Latin.] Struggle; effort; contest.

For the large leap which Debon did compel

Caulin to make, being eight lugs of ground. Fa. Qu.

LUKGAG. n. f. [from lug.] Any thing cumbersome and unwieldy that is to be carried away; any thing of more weight than value.

Come bring your *lugg*age nobly on your back. Shaksp.

To doat thus on such *lugg*age? Shakspere's Tempest.

Thy politic maxims, or that cumbersome *lugg*age of war there shewn me. Milton's Par. Regain'd.

How durst thou with that fullen *lugg*age
O' th' self, old iron, and other baggage,

T' oppose thy lumber against us? Hudibras, p. i.

The mind of man is too light to bear much certainty among the rustling winds of passion and opinion; and if the *lugg*age be prized equally with the jewels, none will be cast out till all be shipwrecked.

A lively faith will bear aloft the mind,
And leave the *lugg*age of good works behind. Dryden.

I am gathering up my *lugg*ages, and preparing for my journey.

LUGUBRIOUS. adj. [lugubris, French; lugubris, Latin.] Mournful; sorrowful.

A demure, or rather a lugubrious look, a sad or whining tone, makes up the sum of many mens humiliations.

LUKEWARM. adj. [The original of this word is doubted. Warmth, in Saxon, is pleos; in old Frisick lilj; in Dutch luete; whence probably our luke, to which warm may be added, to determine, by the first word, the force of the second; as we say, boiling hot.]

1. Moderately or mildly warm; so warm as to give only a pleasing sensation.

A dreary corse, whose life away did pass,
All wallow'd in his own, yet lukewarm blood,

That from his wound yet welled fresh alas! Fairy Queen.

May you a better feast never behold,
You knot of mouth friends; smoke and lukewarm water

Is your perfection. Shaksp. Timon of Athens.

Bathing the body in lukewarm water is of great advantage to temperate hot and sharp humours. Wise man's Surgery.

Whence is it but from this attractive power that water, which alone diffils with a gentle lukewarm heat, will not diffil from salt of tartar without a great heat?

2. Indifferent; not ardent; not zealous.
If some few continue steadfast, it is an obedience to lukewarm and languishing, that it inherits not the name of passion.

This fober conduct is a mighty virtue
In lukewarm patriots.

LUKEWARMLY. adv. [from the adjective.]
1. With moderate Warmth.

LUKEWARMNESS. n. f. [from lukewarm.]

LUM

1. Moderate or pleasing heat.
2. Indifference; want of ardour.

Some kind of zeal counts all merciful moderation lukewarmness.

The defect of zeal is lukewarmness, or coldness in religion; the excess is inordinate heat and spiritual fury.

Go dry your chaff and stubble, give fire to the zeal of your faction, and reproach them with lukewarmness.

To lull. v. a. [lulla, Danish; lulla, Latin.]
1. To compose to sleep by a pleasing sound.

There trickled softly down
A gentle stream, whose murmuring wave did play
Amongst the pumy stones, and made a sound

To lull him soft a sleep, that by it lay. Fairy Queen, b. ii.

Such sweet compulsion doth in mulek lie,
To lull the daughters of necessity. Milton.

These lull'd by nightingales embracing slept. Milton.

2. To compose; to quiet; to put to rest.
To find a foe it shall not be his hap;

And peace shall lull him in her flow'ry lap;
No more these scenes my meditations aid,

Or lull to rest the visionary maid. Pope.

By the vocal woods and waters lull'd,
And lost in lonely musing in a dream. Thomson's Spring.

LU'LLABY. n. f. [lullu, Latin. Quem nutricum fuisse deunt contentit Turnebus, from lull: it is observable that the nurses call sleep ty, by; lullaby is therefore lull to sleep.] A song to fill babes.

Only that noise heav'n's rolling circles kept,
Sung lullaby, to bring the world to rest. Fairfax.

Philomel, with melody,
Sing in your sweet lullaby;

Lull a, lulla, lullaby; lulla, lulla, lullaby. Shakspere.

If you will let your lady know I am here to speak with her, and bring her along with you, it may make my bounty further.

—Marry, Sir, lullaby to your bounty till I come again. Shak.
